Jean-Louys Ate
Two Tulips
Worth $1160.00

The year was 1637.
The place, Holland.
The actors, a green
grocer's wife and
Jean-Louys.

The green grocer's
wife was the usual Holland type. Matronly, staid, hard working, and like most of the women of that age and ours, ever on the watch for the chance to better the status of herself and her numerous progeny.

She lived in the age of the "Speculative Tulip." An age when all the world was buying tulips. Buying,
not for love of beauty
or color, but to sell again at figures that we cannot understand. She, too, had bought. Had gone down into the hidden
saving and invested it all in two bulbs, a
"Semper Argentus"
and a "Paragon of Delft."

These had just been delivered to her from Haarlem, when child
number three had trod on a bee, and set up a howl such as only a third child can.
Mother instinct had prevailed over the financial one, the two bulbs were tucked in to a basket and momentarily forgotten.

Jean-Louys was born in France. He had lived forty years in Holland, but suffered
with a French complex, the Holland
cooking, and the Holland language. Most of the Holland reactions he could neither understand nor correct, but he could improve the cooking
and did.

DAFFODILS, JONQUILS or NARCISSUS

We wish to call attention to the fact that all of the bulbs listed below are of MOTHER BULB stock unless otherwise specified. MOTHER BULBS are larger, heavier, produce more blooms per bulb, and increase faster than sizes that are listed as "double nose," "firsts," or "round." MOTHER BULBS are the ones ordinarily reserved by the growers for planting stock. It is only by paying a premium that we are enabled to offer this type of bulb. The above facts are sufficient recommendation for their use without further explanation. A true picture of comparative prices can only be reached when these facts are taken into consideration.

When you fill a Christmas stocking for a gardening friend, remember our Mexican glass vases, Japanese flower shears, Raffia dolls to help in staking plants, kneeling pads, brass trowels, Russian smocks, gay birds on a stick to place in the border, garden luncheon sets, fine seeds, and rare bulbs to surprise her in the Spring,—not to mention bird baths, engraved English sun dials, Normandy cats to run up her pillars, and Pixies to play with Peter Pan.
